

WHERE & WHO WE ARE

U.S. Army in Europe is uniquely positioned to build teams, assure allies and deter enemies. Our area of operations of more than eight million square miles, spanning three continents, contains 51 countries with one-eighth of the world's population and about one fourth of the world's gross domestic product.

"You remain, to state the obvious, America's oldest and our closest allies. And it's hard to imagine a single threat or a single opportunity that cannot be addressed more effectively if we do so together. Simply put, President Obama and I continue to believe that Europe is the cornerstone of our engagement with the rest of the world and is the catalyst for our global cooperation. It's that basic. Nothing has changed."

- U.S. Vice President Joe Biden,
addressing the Munich Security Conference,
Feb. 2, 2013

U.S. ARMY EUROPE IS AMERICA'S STRATEGIC FORWARD ENABLER

U.S. Army Europe leads, builds, assures, and deters.

The U.S. Army is tailored in Europe to train, to deploy, and to support multiple combatant commanders.

Soldiers, Civilians and Families here receive personal and professional broadening experiences that are not available anywhere else in our Army.

U.S. Army Europe's presence on the continent builds the political and popular support among our European allies vital to helping abate regional security threats and worldwide aggression.

The relationships we build with our European partners during more than 1,000 theater security cooperation events in 42 countries each year leads to trust and compatibility for military operations such as in Iraq and Afghanistan, and in recent support to operations in Libya.

By 2015, U.S. Army Europe will have transformed to about 30,000 Soldiers, in seven communities, with a full spectrum of capabilities supporting U.S. strategic interests for multiple combatant commands and allied activities. The U.S. Army Europe remains capable, effective and able to address and prevent current and future security challenges.
